The title of this novel, "The Rain Before It Falls," is a metaphor for those things that exist just beyond our experience, patterns that elude us, meanings we can't yet grasp. Coe uses as narrator the voice of a woman, Rosamond, describing twenty family photos into a tape recorder, before she takes pills and ends her life.

The Rain before it Falls. (€) Thea gives birth to Imogen and there is only more tragedy to come. Perhaps a bit too much tragedy, finally. The last revelations are so grim that credibility starts to strain. There is also, for Coe, a surprising streak of sentimentality, unleavened by his usual coruscating wit.

Jonathan Coe writes: "My grandfather, James Kay, was a great influence on me when I was growing up. He was a warm, funny man, slightly to the left politically, a great reader and a fan (like me) of good comedy. (One of my best early memories is of watching Tom and Jerry cartoons with him, the tears of laughter running down our faces.)

Jonathan Coe FRSL (/ k oʊ /; born 19 August 1961) is an English novelist and writer. His work has an underlying preoccupation with political issues, although this serious engagement is often expressed comically in the form of satire. For example, What a Carve Up! reworks the plot of an old 1960s spoof horror film of the same name. It is set within the "carve up" of the UK's resources which some ...
